Dear Students,

The best part of my job is meeting you—International Baccalaureate students. I love your enthusiasm and talent, the intelligence and open-mindedness you have. It's inspiring and, more importantly, energizing to be among you, and I hope to meet as many of you as possible.

So I welcome you to the conference in Montreal with all my heart. I know you will find much to stimulate you here, many impulses to spark off new thoughts and ideas. There will be some wonderful keynote speakers, and plenty of people from McGill and the IB who are keen to talk with you.

Equally important, you will get the chance to meet a wide range of students to build new contacts with, students like yourself from all over the world. I've spoken to many of you who are thinking about life after the IB, potential directions to take, possible careers and ambitions to shape. The entrepreneurs among you can network here, building mutually rewarding relationships with people you would never normally meet.

And this, I believe, is one of the great strengths you get from an IB education: it prepares you to open up to the world and thrive in it, and to see the potential—to conceive, plan and create the lives, together, that you really want to live. And, your personal power in changing the world around you so it is better for many more.

In this spirit, I wish all of you a successful, stimulating and memorable conference.

Dr. Siva Kumari
Director General

Dear International Baccalaureate (IB)
World Student Conference Participants,

Welcome to the International Baccalaureate (IB) Organization's World student Conference at McGill University in Montreal, Quebec, Canada. What an exciting week this will be for all of you! In addition to providing you with the opportunity to develop new friendships with other IB students from around the world, and the chance to explore the beautiful and vibrant city of Montreal, your week will largely be spent discussing Human Rights for the 21st century—and McGill University provides an ideal location to do so.

McGill University has long played a key role in the scholarly fight for the advancement of human rights. In 1946, John Humphrey, then a Professor of Law at McGill University, was asked to work with a committee of the United Nations Secretariat to help the organization draft a statement on human rights. Translated into 321 languages and dialects, the Universal Declaration of Human Rights is quite probably the most cited legal document ever drafted by a Canadian. Building upon the human rights legacy found in the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, McGill created the McGill Centre for Human Rights and Legal Pluralism in September 2005.

During the week-long conference, you will be presented with the opportunity to listen, learn, share and problem-solve. It is our hope that the program will be used as a springboard to stimulate reflection and action. After spending the week preparing your project, you will have the opportunity to present it to your peers on Friday, the final day of the conference program.

Thank you for being a part of this great event and for bringing your perspectives to share with others.

Suzanne Fortier
Principal and Vice-Chancellor
